

The Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) challenge to Indiana's Telephone Privacy law would not be in the best interest of the public. Since enactment of this Law, my family can now enjoy time at home without the bother of answering unsolicited calls from marketers. My family urges the FCC to not permit any change to the Indiana law as it currently exists. This would be extremely annoying considering the continued expansion of cell phones throughout the country and would possibly interfere with everyday business and personal use of our phones.
